Dean Christine Hammill-Cregan

Huntington, Tuesday, June 4th 6pm - 10pm

Mon. June 24 -Thur. June 27 8am - 4:30pm

Dean Hammill-Cregan, JD, MSW, has taught conflict resolution as a Fulbright Scholar in Bosnia and at John Jay CUNY. She was a mediator of family disputes as well as workplace disputes and combines this experience with theology in this one week intensive course.

Course Description

This course explores the dynamics of conflict (interpersonal disputes) from a Christian perspective with an emphasis on developing effective methods of resolving conflict for parish leaders and those working in ministry. The course will integrate skills building techniques to effectively engage in conflict in an authentically Christian way. Methods employed will include (1) theological reflection upon selected texts from Sacred Scripture, theologians, the Magisterium and lives of Saints, (2) communication skills of active listening, reflecting and reframing, and (3) conflict resolution strategies and skills. The dual approach of deepening student's understanding of conflict and developing skills to resolve conflict aims to provide students with the ability to transform conflicts into opportunities and foster unity among the people of God.
